The Pinemeadow Excel Monterossa irons blend tour inspiration with game improvement technology, designed for those players looking to take further control of their game.

The sleek radius of the sole and the varying face thickness creates an optimum launch trajectory that maximizes distance through added carry and roll. The slightly offset face offers golfers the ability to shape shots when needed, but still have forgiveness throughout your round.

HOW IT STARTED. WHAT'S THE ADVANTAGE?

In the 1980's Pinemeadow was one of the very first companies to focus on building "legal clones" or "knock-off" golf clubs. Just like the computer, automobile, and fashion industries, golf is an industry of product leaders and product followers. We consider ourselves to be a "smart follower." We look at what is hot and analyze whether it really works as advertised and then tend to follow the concept at a much less expensive but no less effective result.

KEEPING COSTS DOWN

Independent surveys show that up to 70% of the retail price of a name brand golf club goes to support the advertising and brand name development. These advertising and brand development costs are legitimate — they provide advertising revenue to the major golf magazines, they provide many millions of dollars of licensing revenue to PGA Tour professionals, they provide even more millions of dollars to the major television networks. The money spent in advertising builds status and peer pressure to buy a name brand. Every advertising dollar spent by the name brand club is targeted to make you feel better (or justified) in paying more money for the brand. Some people raise their self-esteem by buying a name brand club for more money. Our customers on the other hand raise their self-esteem by getting the best performance for the best value and knowing their name brand buying friends got a worse deal.

WHY ARE NAME BRAND CLUBS SO MUCH MORE EXPENSIVE?

It is simple, really: advertising, overhead, and middlemen. The amount actually spent for research and development by the golf club industry is not nearly as large as the money spent for advertising. The real dollars go toward convincing you to buy the name brand club and paying the middleman to get them into your hands.
